Excerpt from the federal law of 13th February 1957 concerning railways, railway vehicles and rail transport, BGBl No. 60/1957.

§ 46 EisbG 1957: Within the railway system and rail track vicinity any disruptive behaviour towards railway operation, the operation of railway vehicles or towards railway transport is prohibited. In particular it is prohibited to damage, climb, stain or pollute railway system facilities or railway vehicles, further to place objects or install obstacles on railway tracks, reposition track switches, activate catenary switches as well as to sound alarm or give signals without authorisation.

§ 47 paragraph 1 EisbG 1957: Entering railway construction facilities is only allowed in designated areas or with a specific permit issued by a railway company.

§ 47b paragraph 1 EisbG 1957: When using railway facilities and railway vehicles, railway users must comply to all official orders from the railway supervisory body (§ 30 EisbG 1957) and must act as demanded in the safety and operational regulations of the rail company, hereby respecting and considering others.

§ 30 paragraph 1 EisbG 1957: Railway operators have to appoint railway staff (a railway supervisory body) to monitor the behaviour of persons in any railway facility, railway vehicle and during every public rail transport. Unless other competent bodies are at service, monitoring also includes maintaining the railway station forecourt. For railway stations where access rights of other railway undertakings are exercised, supervising the behaviour of the railway companies' employees is included insofar, as it is required to guarantee overall safety and order during the operation of the respective railway undertaking, the respective rail transport and the entire rail operation process.

§ 30 paragraph 3 EisbG 1957: Railway supervisory bodies may detain persons, contravening the regulations of § 43 paragraph 1, § 46, § 47 paragraph 1, § 47a and § 47b including those issued due to a regulation in accordance with § 47c, when caught in the act, provided all other requirements of § 35 of the Administrative Penal Act 1991 (VStG), BGBl No. 52 are met and insofar, as no other public security person is available to intervene. If the charges for detention have not been dropped previously, the railway supervisory body is to turn in the detained individuals at the next public security body as soon as possible.
